

NEW MUSIC AT THE PROMS

- Seven BBC commissions and 10 world premieres
- Seventeen UK and London premieres
- Four European premieres
- More than 50 other works new to the Proms

The BBC Proms is more committed than ever to championing new music and this season there are no fewer than 31 premieres by 29 composers. The season includes seven new BBC commissions, and music by 10 composers receiving world premiere performances, 17 works new to London or to the UK and four European premieres. And over 50 other works will be performed at the Proms for the first time, ranging from Mendelssohn motets and Handel's Saul to Prokofiev's Symphonic Song, Ligeti's Violin Concerto and Tippett's King Priam.

BBC COMMISSIONS AND WORLD PREMIERES

Following Joe Duddell's contribution to the King's Singers' Oriana Collection in last year's Proms, his BBC-commissioned percussion concerto Ruby receives its world premiere (Prom 10, Friday 25 July). The 25-minute concerto was written especially for Duddell's long-time friend and collaborator, the brilliant young percussionist Colin Currie. According to Duddell, the title of the new work refers to a private joke between himself and Currie.

The BBC Symphony Orchestra gives the world premiere of Joseph Phibbs's new work, commissioned by the BBC for the Last Night of the Proms (Prom 73, Saturday 13 September). Winner of the 1996 BBC Young Composers' Forum, Phibbs has previously composed three BBC commissioned works. On being asked to compose a piece for the Last Night of the Proms, Phibbs says that he is delighted and that 'it's a unique chance to communicate to a large and extremely diverse audience within a magnificent setting'.

In partnership with three different performing groups, the BBC has commissioned works by three different composers, all of which receive world premieres in this season's Proms. The Pennsylvania-based Bach Choir of Bethlehem premieres Libby Larsen's cantata I It Am, specially commissioned for the Bach Choir's first visit to the Proms (Prom 16, Tuesday 29 July). I It Am draws its text from the writings of Julian of Norwich and, says Larsen, 'is an exposition of human experience revealed to us through these writings – that within each person light is dark and dark is light'. John Woolrich was inspired by Ovid and the story of Mercury, the messenger of the gods, in his 20-minute composition Double Mercury for the Britten Sinfonia (Prom 51, Wednesday 27 August). Woolrich says his latest work is 'about transformation and metamorphosis' and that the title 'refers to the two meanings of "mercury"; Mercury the god who changes from old to young, and the element mercury which is used as an agent in chemical changes'. The Clerks' Group premieres Five Motets, a new work by Robert Saxton (Prom 62, Friday 5 September). Setting passages from Genesis in Latin, the outer motets concern journeys made by Abraham and Jacob, while the second and fourth motets set the composer's own commentaries on these journeys. The central motet, taken from the book of Exodus, sets the Israelites' song of deliverance and, says Saxton, is 'a sort of scherzo, a choral dance'.

Commissioned by the BBC specially for the Proms Chamber Music series and BBC Radio 3 New Generation Artist mezzo-soprano Alice Coote, The Voice of Desire is a new song-cycle by Judith Weir. One of Britain's leading composers, Weir's new work sets texts by Bridges, Keats and Hardy, as well as traditional Yoruba poetry (PCM 4, Monday 11 August).

The Academy of St Martin in the Fields premieres Violin Concerto No. 6, 'Old Brass', a new work by star funk-folk fiddler Mark O'Connor (Prom 32, Monday 11 August). O'Connor has been increasingly involved in mixing country and classical styles and his music has been described by the New York Times as 'complex, sophisticated early-21st-century classical music, reaching deeply into the refined, then the vernacular, and then knocking them dead with the brown-dirt
